Thirteen things Trump has done in the year since he was elected president

Donald Trump was elected president one year ago, and he's done, said and tweeted a lot in that time.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

One year ago, much of the country watched in shock as the numbers came in on election night announcing Donald Trump as the 45th president of the United States. A lot has happened in that year, from protests to new policies to lots and lots of tweets. Here's a small breakdown of a few of the things Trump has done, said and sent out to the world via Twitter in the 12 months since he was elected president.

Nov. 22: In an interview with The New York Times, Trump already begins to ease back on some of his campaign promises, like his vow to "jail" Hillary Clinton. He promises to have an "open mind" about climate change and responds to concerns about conflicts with presidential decisions because of his global businesses, saying, "The law's totally on my side. The president can't have a conflict of interest." Also after his election, Trump claims he won the popular vote.

Dec. 30: Trump praises Vladimir Putin, calling the Russian president "smart" for not retaliating against the U.S. for Russian sanctions.

Jan. 20: On his first official day as president, Trump signed an executive order scaling back the Affordable Care Act. John McDonough, a professor at Harvard's School of Public Health, said this move "set the new administration, on Day 1, on a path of destruction and mayhem regarding the ACA, without any attempt at a coherent substitute."

Not long after, on Jan. 27, Trump signs an executive order banning travel from seven majority-Muslim countries, starting a long battle concerning his travel ban hopes.

Feb. 13: Trump conducts national security business on North Korea nuclear testing while at Mar-a-Lago, providing club members with front-row seats to top-secret matters.

March 6: In an attempt to overcome some legal troubles with his January travel ban, Trump signs a new executive order, taking Iraq off of the list of countries from which travel is barred.

April 6: Trump launches a missile strike on a Syrian air base while at Mar-a-Lago with Chinese President Xi Jinping. Trump reportedly told Xi about the move over dessert, a conversation Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross said was "in lieu of after-dinner entertainment."

May 9: Trump fires FBI Director James Comey while Comey was in the middle of investigating whether Trump's campaign colluded with Russia.

June 5: In a series of tweets, Trump attacks the Justice Department and federal courts after they blocked part of his executive order, which limited travel from six predominantly-Muslim countries. Trump said that he preferred "the original travel ban, not the watered down, politically correct version [the Justice Department] submitted to [the Supreme Court]."

July 26: Trump says transgender people will not be allowed in the military because the armed forces can't handle the "tremendous medical costs and disruption."

Aug. 15: After a neo-Nazi rally in Charlottesville,

Virginia, turned deadly, Trump calls white supremacists "very fine people" and said that there is "blame on both sides" for the violence.

Sept. 19: Trump attends the U.N. General Assembly, during which he promised to "totally destroy" North Korea if the country threatens the U.S. or our allies, calling Kim Jong-Un "Rocket Man."

Oct. 3: After Puerto Rico was devastated by Hurricane Maria, Trump jokes about how the U.S. territory has "thrown our budget a little out of whack." A few days later, while visiting the area, he threw paper towels to Puerto Ricans who had lost everything.

Nov. 1: After an Uzbekistan native allegedly carried out a terror attack in Manhattan, Trump called on Congress to end the Diversity Visa Lottery Program, saying that instead, he's fighting for "merit-based" immigration.

WELCOME TO METRO BOSTON

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

Did you make it to the polls on Tuesday? Overall, it wasn't expected to be the most exciting Election Day, with a low voter turnout anticipated and the latest polls showing Mayor Marty Walsh to win. The voting ended after Metro's print deadline, but we continued the coverage online. Make sure to check out metroboston.us for the latest.

HOUSE REPUBLICANS SEEK TAX VOTE NEXT WEEK

Republicans plan to put a bill to overhaul the U.S. tax system to a vote in the House of Representatives next week, a senior lawmaker said on Tuesday as a top ratings agency predicted the tax cuts would clear Congress but balloon the federal deficit. Facing pockets of discontent in their own ranks, Republican tax negotiators in the House are seeking to resolve differences over the legislation this week and stick to a self-imposed deadline of passage this month. "We'll bring it to the floor next week," House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Kevin Brady told Fox News. "Our goal is to pass it next week out of the House." The tax plan, if it gets through the Republican-controlled House, would likely face a more serious challenge in the Senate, where the party only has a majority of 52-48 votes and may need help from Democrats.

MILITARY ERROR ALLOWED GUNMAN TO BUY WEAPONS

2 The man who carried out one of the deadliest U.S. mass shootings was able to buy guns legally because a prior domestic violence conviction while he was in the Air Force was never put into an FBI database used in background checks. Devin Kelley was convicted by court-martial of assaulting his first wife and stepson while serving in the U.S. Air Force in 2012, according to the Pentagon. Authorities put the death toll at 26, including the unborn child of a pregnant woman who was killed. The attack ranks as the fifth-deadliest by a single gunman in U.S. history. The Air Force said it had failed to transmit information about Kelley's conviction to the National Criminal Information Center system, a U.S. government database used by licensed firearms dealers to check prospective gun buyers for criminal backgrounds.

CHURCH GUNMAN ESCAPED MENTAL FACILITY IN 2012

3 The man who carried out one of the deadliest U.S. mass shootings escaped from a mental health facility in 2012, the same year he was convicted by a U.S. Air Force court-martial of domestic abuse, according to a police report. Devin Kelley, who massacred 26 people at a church in rural southeastern Texas on Sunday, was convicted of assaulting his first wife and stepson while serving in the U.S. Air Force in 2012, according to the Pentagon. That same year he briefly escaped from a mental health facility in Santa Teresa, New Mexico, according to an El Paso, Texas, police report. The person who reported Kelley's escape warned police that he could be a danger to himself and others and had been caught sneaking weapons into Holloman Air Force Base in New Mexico, where he had been stationed, according to the police report. He had attempted to "carry out death threats that [Kelley] had made on his military chain of command," the report stated. Police found Kelley in El Paso and turned him over to New Mexico police to return him to the facility, according to the police report. The attack at the First Baptist Church in Sutherland Springs, Texas, ranks as the fifth-deadliest by a single gunman in U.S. history. The dead ranged in age from 18 months to 77 years, including the unborn child of a pregnant woman who was killed. Twenty others were wounded, with 10 still in critical condition on Tuesday, officials said. Kelley died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound in his getaway vehicle, where authorities found two handguns, said Freeman Martin, a spokesman for the state Department of Public Safety. Kelley was also wounded by a resident of the town of about 400 people who heard the gunshot, grabbed his rifle and raced to the church, shooting the 26-year-old twice as he fled.

Massachusetts residents voted to legalize marijuana in Nov. 2016. FUCHS / CREATIVE COMMONS

Massachusetts is hiring a marijuana inspector

The job opening, within the state's agriculture department, was recently posted online as the Massachusetts marijuana industry develops.

@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Massachusetts' marijuana industry is beginning to bud, and that means state jobs in the field are up for grabs. Are you interested in becoming a cannabis inspector?

The opening for a pot inspector was recently posted on the Mass.gov career site. The position falls within the Massachusetts Department of Agricultural Resources, which is further divided into four areas: agricultural conservation and technical assistance, agricultural markets, animal health and crop and pest services.

"Cannabis [marijuana and hemp] is a new crop for Massachusetts," the job description reads. "This inspector position will enforce the laws and regulations involving hemp and overlapping laws and regulations that impact the cultivation of marijuana."

The state is looking for someone with a bachelor's degree or higher in agronomy, biology, chemistry, plant pathology, entomology or other related fields, and though the application doesn't ask if you're familiar with weed itself, it does say that they're looking for someone who has "experience or knowledge about cannabis and how it is regulated in other states."

It was exactly a year ago, in November 2016, that Massachusetts voters chose to legalize recreational marijuana for adults aged 21 and over. Since then, the state has formed the new Cannabis Control Commission, which will draft cannabis regulations and oversee the industry across the state.

The inspector will coordinate with state, local and national agencies, according to the job posting, and will help "create and enforce laws and regulations involving hemp and overlapping laws and regulations that impact the cultivation of marijuana."

The state also recently posted a job opening for a hemp/marijuana program coordinator as well. That position, also within the department of agriculture, will also coordinate on the state, local and national levels as well as oversee program operations like education, outreach, guidance and rule-making.

The department of agriculture added that "due to the complexities" of the cannabis crop, a lot of research and investigation work still needs to be done, which the pot program coordinator would help with.

"This inspector ... will enforce the laws and regulations involving hemp and ... the cultivation of marijuana."

MIT SUICIDE LAWSUIT

Massachusetts court to weigh universities' suicide prevention role

The top court in Massachusetts was expected to hear arguments on Tuesday in a closely watched lawsuit against the Massachusetts Institute of Technology questioning to what extent universities and colleges can be held responsible when students commit suicide.

The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court will weigh whether to revive a lawsuit by the father of Han Nguyen, who at the age of 25 jumped to his death on the university's campus in 2009.

The lawsuit has drawn the interest of other Massachusetts schools, including Harvard University and Tufts University, which say a ruling against MIT would unreasonably require nonclinical faculty and staff to secure students against harming themselves.

The 18 schools said in a brief that such a requirement could expose them to discrimination lawsuits if they exclude such a student from a program to prevent harm and would have a "chilling effect on students with mental health conditions and other concerns."

In court papers, a lawyer for Nguyen's father contends that MIT owed a duty of care to Nguyen, whose mental health status was declining, yet officials at the school did nothing despite knowing he was a suicide risk. REUTERS

Sia outsmarts the internet

Sia is a very talented singer and songwriter who is most popular for the likes of "Chandelier," a song we have nestled in the back of our heads at all times. She rarely shows her face, preferring instead to mask her likeness with a variety of wigs and or people dancing in front of her. But now, the 41-year-old is changing her tune. Well, sort of. After learning that naked images of her were being sold on the internet, the "Dusk Til Dawn" crooner uploaded an image of her derriere herself, beating those no-good-no-manners-having-money-hungry paparazzi bastards herself.

"Someone is apparently trying to sell naked photos of me to my fans," she wrote. "Save your money, here it is for free. Everyday is Christmas!" LOL, go get 'em Sia.

Also, hey guys? Maybe stop taking nude pictures of women and selling them for profit.

Good ol' Sia.

Meghan and Prince Harry still not engaged

We've been lied to, led to believe that Meghan Markle and Prince Harry's engagement was right around the corner. But apparently, it's not happening anytime soon. Rude!

A source with "excellent contacts in the palace" tells the Daily Beast that there won't be an announcement until at least after Kate has had her third baby in April. The source also notes that maybe, you know, Harry and Meghan want to cohabitate before getting engaged, because that's what couples "do."

The Hot Ginger Prince's biographer, Penny Junor, agrees there's likely no rush. "The longer it doesn't happen, the more doubt I have about it, not least because her biological clock [Meghan is 36] means that if they were going to marry and have children, they would need to get going sooner rather than later." Don't know why we needed to bring Meghan's uterus into this, but OK.

Meek Mill's sentence proves the system is broken

We're no big fans of Meek, but come on.

Monday, a Pennsylvania judge sentenced rapper and former boyfriend of Nicki Minaj — sorry to bring that back up, Nicki, it had to have been a dark time — Meek Mill to two to four years in prison for violating probation. After he failed a drug test, he was immediately taken into custody.

Variety notes that the sentence was unexpected. Prosecutors recommended the 30-year-old not be imprisoned for the probation violations, as he's been drug-free since January and has complied with most of the probationary requirements.

The real kicker here, though, is the one that The Sparrow Project brought up on Twitter.

"For a failed urine test, Meek Mill was sentenced to more jail time than Darren Wilson (Michael Brown's killer), Timothy Loehmann (Tamir Rice's killer), Daniel Pantaleo (Eric Garner's killer), Sean Williams (John Crawford's killer) [and] Michael Slager (Walter Scott's killer) COMBINED."

So yeah. The system is broken.

Lamar Odom is 'spiraling'

This doesn't look great.
ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Lamar Odom, a man who was once married to Khloe Kardashian, is "spiraling." Here's hoping it has nothing to do with Khloe's recent announcement that she's pregnant by another NBA dude.

After news broke that the former basketball player had a fainting spell in an L.A. nightclub on Sunday morning, sources close to the 38-year-old now say that he's out of control again.

"Lamar is spiraling again," the source says. "He's out of control. ... He was better this spring but things got worse over the summer and everyone is worried things are going to get even worse and they're scared for him." Aw, man.

A rep tells Page Six that Odom's fall was caused by an intense workout beforehand and dehydration. But he has also struggled pretty publicly with drug and alcohol abuse in the past, having gone into recovery and rehab in late 2016.

Here's hoping the dude gets on the right path. Self-care is where it's at, Odom.

'Last Flag Flying' — more of a buddy film than war movie

30 years later, three soldiers reunite in brotherhood.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
@MetroNewYork
gregory.wakeman@metro.us

This isn't your typical war movie.

In the absence of guns, violence and bloodshed, the focus of "Last Flag Flying" is on the ties that bind soldiers for life.

Three veterans of the Vietnam War (played by Bryan Cranston, Steve Carell and Laurence Fishburne) come together to bury a son whose life was cut short during service in the Iraq War, and the touching treatment of patriotism and loss will knock the wind out of you.

"It was unlike anything I had every read," Fishburne tells us.

"I describe it as a grief piece. And yet it's also this weird road-trip/buddy movie. It's not a war film. It is a film about grief. We see movies about the heroism of war, or the madness of war, or the history of war, or how conflicts evolve. But we don't get to tell stories about the people left behind."

Directed by the prolific Richard Linklater, who has brought us laughs ("Dazed and Confused") and heartbreak ("Boys n the Hood"), the evolution of each of the characters is beautifully constructed. "You know that you're getting to work with someone special," says Fishburne about the director. "He really understands it from all sides. He's a writer, director and an actor. He understands what actors need, and understands how the writing melds with the directing, which melds with the performances. He understands how to control the ship perfectly, mixing comedy with heavy circumstances. He's just so thoughtful, and curious about the human condition."

The movie "invites you in, in a very quiet way," says Fishburne.

"Last Flag Flying" opens in theaters around Boston on Nov. 17.

Ken Burns hosts Thoreau film premiere at Boston College

See the new short about the famed author.

CHARLIE WOLFSON
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

After making headlines most recently for his critically acclaimed series on the Vietnam War, Ken Burns is back with the short "Walden," which premieres at Boston College on Wednesday night.

The documentarian serves as an executive producer for the film about the life and writings of Henry David Thoreau. Narrated by Robert Redford, "Walden" also explores how Thoreau provided inspiration for an environmental movement that's important to the prosperity of our country and the world at large.

"I've long been interested in Thoreau," Burns said in a statement. "But like others, I'm increasingly drawn not just to the eloquence of his writings but also to the importance of them as we urgently look to create greater awareness and appreciation of nature and the environment."

Burns will host the premiere along with fellow filmmakers Erik Ewers and Christopher Loren Ewers, as well as musician Don Henley. After the screening, Burns, Henley and the Ewers brothers will have a discussion and field questions from the audience, moderated by CNN presidential historian Douglas Brinkley.

The film was created to be shown at the Walden Pond visitors' center, but its message is much broader. Henley stressed the importance of the film in today's society, especially in creating awareness among youth.

"There is no better way to encourage youth toward active engagement in the preservation of the planet than to awaken their intrinsic sense of wonder derived from communion with nature," he said in a statement. "Walden Pond — the birthplace of the

the nonprofit in 1990 to protect the historic woods near Walden Pond from development. They've coordinated with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation on programs at the Walden Pond State Reservation, which is visited by over a half million people annually.

Why Medford is the new Somerville

Millennials are migrating to the Massachusetts town.

MEGAN JOHNSON
letters@metro.us

Forget Somerville. For millennials looking to put down roots in the Boston area, Medford is the place to be.

In October, Realtor.com released its third-annual list of the Hottest ZIP Codes in America, with the city of Medford, Massachusetts (02155), scoring the No. 4 slot, behind Watuga, Texas, Livonia, Michigan, and Kentwood, Michigan. So who's making the peaceful enclave one of the hottest ZIPs in the U.S.? Millennials, who make up 38 percent of new mortgage holders in Medford.

Lara Shuqom, real estate consultant and agent at Compass, joins the chorus that describes Medford as the "new Somerville," citing its proximity to downtown Boston (about 3 miles) as well as the restaurant and retail scene in nearby Somerville.

"Buyers, especially millennials, have more purchasing power in Medford vs. Somerville, but can still benefit from the proximity to Somerville's amenities, like the uber-popular Assembly Row, easy highway access and transportation options, without paying the higher sale prices," says Shuqom. "Medford allows homebuyers to purchase a potentially larger/more renovated property for less while still providing access to the city, transportation options, amenities and a neighborhood vibe that millennials crave — 'urban suburban,' I call it."

She adds, "Taxes are also very reasonable, which to a millennial home-buyer can make a big difference in their housing expenses."

According to Realtor.com, Medford's median list price is $541,158, up 12.9 percent over last year. Homes sell on average in 19 days, a 41 percent increase from just last year. So what caused the significant increases in comparison to just last year? Again, Shuqom says it's safe to say that Somerville's own real estate boom is the answer.

Its explosion sent shock waves through surrounding towns, which include once-quieter markets like Medford. As a result, buyers were prompted to purchase in Medford while prices were still deemed "reasonable."

Add in the already low inventory of housing throughout the Greater Boston area and the 18,000 additional jobs that are expected to pop up in Middlesex County, and it seems that Medford's popularity will only continue to rise.

Following Medford in the list of hottest ZIP codes were Littleton, Colorado (80123); Castro Valley, California (94546); Colorado Springs, Colorado (80922); Overland Park, Kansas (66210); Mira Mesa, California (92126); and Hilliard, Ohio (43026).

"While low inventory is a challenge, millennials are the largest generation in U.S. history and they are flexing their muscle when it comes to the housing market," Danielle Hale, chief economist for Realtor.com, said in a press release. "Increasingly, the hottest housing markets are the ones that appeal to millennial preferences, and right now the standouts are relatively affordable suburbs with local 'it' factors such as hiking trails, great restaurants and nightlife. With the largest cohort of millennials turning 30 in 2020, we can expect these types of areas to stay in demand in the years to come."

C's thriving after initial setback

The Celtics own the best record in the NBA and face the rival Lakers tonight at the Garden.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

It's been just three weeks since Gordon Hayward's ankle bent like a wet noodle in Cleveland.

In the initial minutes, hours and days after the gruesome injury, most pundits declared that the Celtics' 2017-18 season was already dead.

"And that is how quickly a season can change," TNT play-by-play announcer Kevin Harlan said right after the play.

TNT analyst Charles Barkley painted an even more grim picture.

"The thing that really sucks is, their season's over," Barkley said at halftime. "We knew going into the season it was the Cavaliers (at No. 1), the Celtics (at No. 2), the Wizards (at No. 3) and Toronto (at No. 4). Now the Celtics ... it's going to be very difficult for them even to be in the top four or five in the East."

It's not even Thanksgiving yet (i.e. it's still extremely early in the

What's on tap?

The Celtics have three straight games at home (Lakers tonight, Hornets Friday, Raptors Sunday) before taking on the Nets in Brooklyn next Tuesday. None of those teams are exactly lighting the league on fire right now as they have a combined record of 19-20. The Celtics could very well have a 13-game win streak going for them when they face off with the reigning NBA champion Warriors at the Garden on Nov. 16.

NBA season), but the Celtics look like they're going to be just fine without Hayward. Right now, at least, they're proving critics wrong and are absolutely thriving.

The C's have won nine games in a row and haven't lost since falling to the Bucks in their first full game without Hayward. After an initial hiccup in Brad Stevens' offense, Kyrie Irving looks more than comfortable now as he leads the Celtics in points (22.3), assists (5.7) and steals (2.2) per game. While his scoring average is a shade below what he was averaging with the Cavs last year, Irving has shown signs in the past week that he's ready to put up a 40 or 50 point night soon. He pumped in a season-high 35 points on Monday against Atlanta and was sterling down the stretch of the Celtics' highly impressive 101-94 victory at Oklahoma City last Friday night.

Al Horford has been sensational in his role as the Robin to Irving's Batman this season as he's averaging 14.6 points and 9.2 rebounds per game. Horford averaged just 6.8 rebounds per game last season and his defense has greatly improved as well this year. It was seen as hyperbole even just a couple weeks ago when Stevens mentioned Horford as an elite NBA defender, but even the most cynical Celtics fans are starting to buy in on that notion.

"A lot of names get thrown around in defensive talk around the league," Stevens said two weeks back. "I mean there's a lot of really good defenders but Al's up there and doesn't always get mentioned, and that's OK with Al. I think that he's kind of proven that he's OK with just contributing to winning whether he gets talked about or not."

The Celtics are statistically the best defensive team in the NBA when it comes to points allowed. The C's are giving up just 94.5 points per game, which is a pretty impressive mark in today's NBA in which final scores are regularly in the 100s. Consider that the Celtics' primary competition in the East – the Cavaliers – are giving up 113.4 points per game. The Wizards? 109.2 points per game.

Rookie battle

It's entirely possible that tonight's Celtics (9-2) versus Lakers (5-5) matchup is a preview of the 2018-19 NBA Finals. Think about it - if LeBron James jumps to the Lakers this coming summer (which has been heavily rumored) and he gets, say, a Paul George or a Chris Paul to join him – then LA will pose a legit challenge to the Warriors out West.

A Celtics-Lakers NBA Finals with Kyrie and LeBron (no love lost there) as the focal points would take this rivalry to an entirely different level.

While that aspect of the rivalry is still mostly a dream, young cornerstones of each franchise will square off for the first time tonight.

The No. 2 and No. 3 overall picks from the 2017 NBA Draft, Jayson Tatum and Lonzo Ball, will meet for the first time, and both have lived up to their billing thus far. Tatum has been sensational for the C's as he averaging 14.3 points per game and came up with a crucial 3-pointer in Monday night's win over Atlanta. The pass-first Ball is averaging 6.9 assists and 8.8 points per game. He also had a 29-point outing on Oct. 20 against Phoenix.

Tatum and Ball are two of the favorites to win NBA Rookie of the Year, along with 76ers stud Ben Simmons.

NFL power rankings | by Luke Miller

No. 1

Eagles 8-1 (W vs. DEN)

Everything is still clicking for the league-leading Eagles, including their newest teammate Jay Ajayi, who rumbled for 77 yards Sunday and scored from 44 yards out. That was Ajayi's first touchdown of 2017.

Patriots 6-2 (BYE)

The Patriots return to action with an oddly enticing matchup in reeling Denver. With Tom Brady and Carson Wentz shaping up to be two of the leading MVP contenders in the league MVP race, Brady will get his shot at the Broncos' secondary a week after Wentz threw four touchdowns and put up 51 points.

No. 3

Steelers 6-2 (BYE)

The Steelers gained ground on Cincinnati and, more importantly, Baltimore during their week off. That's about as good as a bye can get, and now they leave it to face the Colts, who won't be seeing Andrew Luck on the field anytime soon. That's about as good as a bye-exiting opponent can get.

No. 4

Saints 6-2 (W vs. TB)

The Saints get bumped up because they've been decimating teams. The Bucs have plenty of problems, but on Sunday, their biggest included figuring out Alvin Kamara. What's more surprising in New Orleans is the way the defense has responded after opening the season with a few poor performances.

No. 5

Rams 6-2 (W vs. NYG)

The Rams entered the week leading the league in margin of victory and they sure didn't do anything to upset that trend Sunday. The Giants defense hadn't been their main problem this season but that didn't stop Jared Goff from setting career bests in touchdowns (4) and yards (311) passing.

No. 6

Vikings 6-2 (BYE)

Teddy Bridgewater is likely to return now as Case Keenum's backup while Sam Bradford could head to the IR to make room. Firmly in the driver's seat in the NFC North, Minnesota leaves its bye week to take on Washington, fresh off an upset of Seattle.

No. 7

Panthers 6-3 (W vs. ATL)

The Panthers overcame two Jonathan Stewart fumbles to get past Atlanta in the NFC South race. Devin Funchess and Curtis Samuel combined for eight of the team's 13 catches after Kelvin Benjamin was traded in order to get them more targets.

No. 8

Cowboys 5-3 (W vs. KC)

Dallas got another game out of the sometimes-suspended Ezekiel Elliott, who put up 93 rushing yards and the game-winning score against KC while Dak Prescott's matched and in some ways surpassed that of his improbable rookie season.

No. 9

Jaguars 5-3 (W vs. CIN)

The Jaguars handed out a last-second suspension to Leonard Fournette and ran for 149 yards without him. Jalen Ramsey got ejected and they still limited Cincy to 119 passing yards. Now that's how you win two-straight for the first time this season.

No. 10

Seahawks 5-3 (L vs. WAS)

Russell Wilson was forced to do everything, pacing the team with 77 rushing yards, more than the rest of Seattle's ball carriers combined. That didn't contribute as much as the 16 penalties or the three field goals Blair Walsh missed.

Best of the rest

- 11— Chiefs (6-3)
- 12— Bills (5-3)
- 13— Lions (4-4)
- 14— Redskins (4-4)
- 15— Falcons (4-4)
- 16— Titans (5-3)
- 17— Ravens (4-5)
- 18— Raiders (4-5)
- 19— Jets (4-5)
- 20— Chargers (3-5)
- 21— Cardinals (4-4)
- 22— Dolphins (4-4)
- 23— Packers (4-4)
- 24— Bears (3-5)
- 25— Colts (3-6)
